

11 Affordable Options for Opera Lovers in NYC

Going to the opera in New York City can be pricey. Here are 11 places other than the Met where you can see high-quality performances for a song.

By Jacquelin Carnegie

If you're an opera lover, evenings at the Metropolitan Opera and the New York City Opera are already on your itinerary. But there are several small opera companies in New York City that put on marvelous productions in intimate venues at affordable prices.

Brooklyn

Opera Company of Brooklyn (tel. 212/567-3283; www.operabrooklyn.com)

The Opera Company of Brooklyn develops young talent and introduces new audiences to opera. (Many of their singers have gone on to work in regional opera companies across the U.S. and in Europe). Best of all, it has a BYOB policy -- that's right, you bring the drinks, they provide the glasses and snacks!

Read more: <http://frommers.info/trip-ideas/arts-and-culture/11-affordable-options-for-opera-lovers-in-nyc#ixzz4KtnmUgZX>